

Results of St Andrew's Survey

The response rate to the congregational survey distributed in March was very good; 125 responses were received, which is approximately one-half of the recorded congregation and close to average attendance at Communion or other special services. Thus, the percentages presented can be considered a reasonable approximation of the "reality" of St Andrew's.

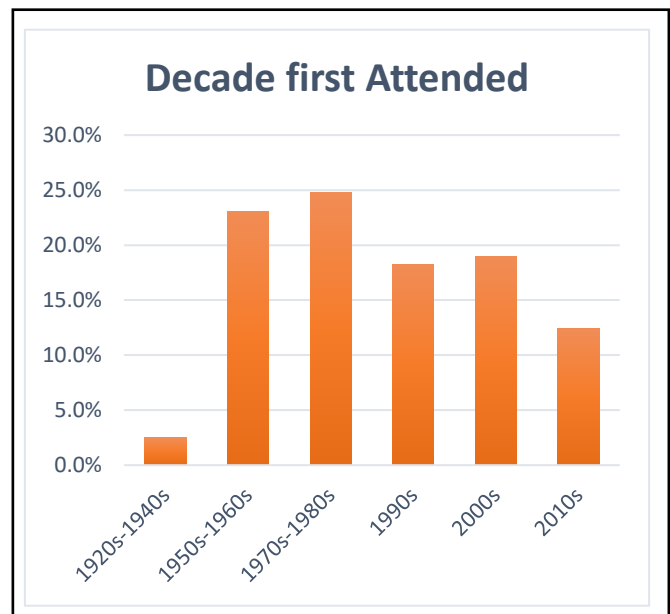

Respondents are very regular attendees. 70% of respondents reported attending nearly every Sunday, and when those attending at least once a month were included, the number increased to 80%.

If a reason was given for attending fewer than 3-4 times per month, it was nearly always because of "work or other commitments".

Most respondents (92%) self-identified as "Members". It is possible that "Adherents" may be attending but uniquely chose not to fill out the survey.

St Andrew's is a very stable congregation without a lot of turnover. Over two-thirds of respondents (69%) have attended since before 2000.

This information makes sense when combined with the following data about "Age" of respondents; someone who has attended since the 1950s or 1970s is most likely in their 60s, 70s or 80s.

The largest age group at St Andrew's are individuals in their 70s (39%). 58% of the congregation is 70 or older, and 77% is over the age of 60. The smallest group is people under the age of 30.

These values are slightly reflective of age groupings in Canadian society (Baby Boomers – 60s, decrease for 50s, slight increase for 40s), but are more likely reflective of the general “greying” of churches.

Thus, on any given Sunday, a congregant is most likely to be a member over the age of 60 that shows up nearly every week, and has been doing so for over 15 years.

Perhaps not surprisingly, the most common reason given for first attending St Andrew's was “family”, like parents and spouses. Interestingly, “driving or walking by” was the next most common reason given. Reported response to advertising such as newspapers, website, or social media was low or non-existent.

Respondents have been and are very active in the day-to-day functioning of St Andrew's, and social activities; most have participated in several of the activities listed (not all are shown).

A very encouraging result of this survey was the indicated willingness of 35 respondents (28%) to be contacted for further discussion. Stay tuned!
